A thought to ponder:

In the first reading (Jeremiah 1:4-10) we hear how the young Jeremiah is called to be a prophet, a task that seems too big for him. It's a typical call story, complete with trying to argue his way out of the task – but God has more confidence in Jeremiah than Jeremiah has in himself. God promises to be with him and gives him authority to speak, uproot, and build. When have you felt unqualified or too small for something you sensed God was calling you to do—and how might trusting God's confidence in you change your response?
